Libya

PART 1

Okay so before we start with the basic Do's and Don'ts. Here are a few stuff to learn about Libya. Libya, officially the State of Libya, is a country in the Maghreb region in North Africa. Most people who come here are either smugglers, service crews or war journalists. It's heavily advised by people to Avoid all travel to Libya due to persistent insecurity throughout the country, including sustained armed conflict, a high risk of terrorist attacks, an unpredictable political situation and a high crime rate.

But if you do happen to come by to Libya, Here are a few stuff you should and shouldn't do!

PART 2

Some few tips that just might get your through the night!

- DON'T show the soles of your shoes/feet, i.e. when sitting at a table in a cafe/restaurant with your legs crossed. Libyans find this very offensive.
- DON'T scold or smack your badly behaved child in public. Libyans think that all children are sugar coated angels.
- DON'T respond to bad driving by other road users

PART 3

To shed some light on this country.

- DO remember that a speedometer in Libya is there to tell you how fast you're NOT going.
- DO remember that when waiting for a repairman to call, Libyans have two speeds - slow and stop
- DO butt in when waiting in a shop and wanting to buy something. Otherwise someone else will butt in before you anyway. It's not considered bad manners.

PART 3

So the next time you travel to Libya, remember. The country has basically a "No-rules-here" sign in they place. Don't forget your shorts, your wallet.
