

Finding God in the Pandemic: When We Ignore Science, We Ignore God

Reaction:

My reaction is that I agree to the statement “When we Ignore Science, We Ignore God” because Scientists are the searches and conceptual sculptors. We collect data, test out possible concepts that allow us to make predictions from that data, and use the results to cleave away at our original conceptions of physical reality and how it changes. This hones our understanding of what God is, and is not. It is a never-ending process: the universe is seemingly infinite. One example of this is when a student has exams tomorrow and all He do is just playing not reviewing and when the examination comes he pray that “Help me pass this exam, Amen”, do you think that student will pass? Because Science is the work and God will do the miracle.

Reflection:

My reflection is that I know that God is always there Guiding, and Helping us as we live our everyday lives so let's help ourselves and do the action what we are praying for. Because if we don't miracles won't happen in just a snap second without doing any actions. So I believe that when we Ignore Science, We also Ignore God because if we are just full of words but less actions it's all for nothing.

God is really present because God is using other people to know that God won't leave us behind but help us and give us hope. God is giving other people wisdom to make a vaccine for COVID-19 God is using every people and giving them a purpose that will help the community to get what we had, what we have before.
